When I copied your code and ran it, the first decoded message was: Vendo la basura en la ciudad más bonita del mundo Of course, the actual encoded message started with æÿÆ, so we may assume you copied the encoded text from a message posted on and not from the real message. When you ran your code, you should have stored the decoded output in a variable. Then, you might have discovered the true message: a con las vacas del chingo sobre mí las luces You didn't find it because you used an incorrect encoding, as it would have been handled by your code. Theory: When a text file has no encoding specified, the platform default encoding is used. This is usually UTF-8, but it's not guaranteed.
